The beloved comedy is coming back and Will Smith is on board, but it's not going to be like the Fresh Prince you remember. Smith's Westbrook Studios / Universal TV are producing a new version of the series inspired by a fan-made trailer that went viral in 2019. The trailer, created by cinematographer Morgan Cooper, reimaged the show as a drama called Bel-Air with essentially the same exact plot as the '90s NBC sitcom but with a much darker vibe, focused on the realities of a teen being sent from West Philadelphia to live with his rich uncle in Bel-Air after getting himself into some trouble. In the trailer, which you can still watch on YouTube, Uncle Phil, Carlton, and Aunt Viv are all there, but the wacky hijinks are nowhere to be found. Cooper is co-creating the show with executive producer and showrunner Chris Collins, and according to Deadline, Bel-Air will be able to dive deeper into the conflicts, emotions, and biases that there wasn't time for in the original sitcom. Smith publicly praised the trailer when it went viral in March 2019, and released his own video in which he interviewed Cooper along with former writers of the original show, calling the idea "brilliant." "Bel-Air is a reimagining. It's a reinterpretation of this incredible story, and bringing it into modern day life in 2019," Cooper explained in the video. "As funny as the episodes are, there was a whole other layer that you couldn't do." Smith said. "In a one hour drama, you can do eight episode arcs! The dramatic version of these ideas means that you can use existing storylines, but it's not going to seem like you're retaking an episode, because the storyline's gonna be brand new from the dramatic perspective. No network is attached to the show yet, but Deadline reports that the show is being shopped around to streamers and Netflix. Peacock, HBO Max, Amazon, and Apple are all interested. The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air is available to stream on HBO Max through Warner Bros TV Distribution, but Peacock has become the home for most shows produced by Universal TV. The series stars Will Smith as a fictionalized version of himself, a street-smart teenager born and raised in West Philadelphia who is sent to live with his wealthy uncle and aunt in Bel-Air, Los Angeles, where his life often clashes with that of his upper-class relatives. The series was considered Will Smith's star vehicle into television, and later his film career. The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air was a hit top for NBC, running for 148 episodes over six seasons.[1][2] A reunion special/retrospective reuniting the surviving cast debuted on HBO Max in November 2020.[3][4]A more dramatic reimagining of the series, titled Bel-Air and based on the fan film of the same name, was given a two-season order for Peacock, and released on February 13, 2022.[5] Will Smith and James Avery were the only actors to have appeared in all 148 episodes of the television sitcom.[6] The theme song and opening sequence set the premise of the show. Will Smith is a street-smart African-American teenager, "born and raised" in West Philadelphia. While playing street basketball, Will accidentally hits a group of young people with the ball, causing a confrontation that frightens his mother, who sends him to live with his wealthy aunt and uncle in the opulent neighborhood of Bel Air, Los Angeles. Will's working class background ends up clashing in various humorous ways with the upper class world of the Banks family - Will's stern uncle Phil and tough but fair aunt Vivian and their children. Will's cousins: spoiled Hilary, pompous Carlton, impressionable Ashley and baby Nicky (introduced in season 3), as well as their sarcastic butler Geoffrey. ~ Main cast (credited) ~ Recurring cast (4-4) Actor Character 1 2 3 4 5 6 Will Smith William "Will" Smith Main James Avery Philip Banks Main Janet Hubert-Whitten Vivian Banks Main Daphne Maxwell Reid Main Alfonso Ribeiro Carlton Banks Main Karyn Parsons Hilary Banks Main Tatyana M. In 1989, music manager Benny Medina, along with his business partner, real estate mogul Jeff Pollack, decided to market a TV story based on Medina's life. Medina had grown up poor in East Los Angeles but his life changed when he befriended a rich white teenager, whose family lived in Beverly Hills and allowed Medina to live with them. Medina decided to use this part of his life as the main focus of the show. However, given that by then a black character living with a white family was a concept that had been done multiple times on TV, Medina decided to change the rich white family to a rich black family, "That way we could explore black-on-black prejudice as well as black class differences", Medina said in an interview for Ebony magazine.[47] Medina pitched the idea to Quincy Jones, who had just signed a deal with Warner Bros. Ali 1997 The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air's success is considered to be a watershed moment for hip-hop and black television,[68][69] with many publications referring to it as one of the greatest sitcoms of all time.[70][71] Professor Andrew Horton stated: "Smith's genre of comedy, popularized on the sitcom Fresh Prince of Bel-Air, translated well into commercial box-office appeal. The Fresh Prince watered down and capitalized upon the then growing popularity of hip-hop and almost anticipated its dominance on the American scene".[72] Author Willie Tolliver noted: "What The Fresh Prince did accomplish was to put Smith and his character Will into an environment of affluence and possibility, thus changing the terms of his own Black identity. This social and cultural mobility is central to Smith's racial significance, and this will become evident again and again; he moves the image of the Black male into unaccustomed spaces just as Smith himself was in the process of conquering Hollywood".[73] Main article: Bel-Air (TV series) On August 13, 2015, it was reported that a reboot of the show was in development by Overbrook Entertainment, with Will Smith serving as a producer.[74][75] In August 2016, during a promotional interview with the E! television network for his then upcoming film Suicide Squad, Smith denied that a reboot was in development, saying that it had not yet happened, "pretty close to when Hell freezes over".[76] In 2019, a mock trailer titled Bel-Air was uploaded on YouTube, written and directed by Morgan Cooper, for a darker, more dramatic re-imagining of the sitcom.[77][78] Will Smith subsequently heavily praised the fan film, commenting that "Morgan did a ridiculous trailer for Bel-Air. Brilliant idea, the dramatic version of The Fresh Prince for the next generation", expressing interest in expanding the idea beyond the short film into a full Bel-Air reboot series.[79][80] In August 2020, it was announced that Will Smith and Morgan Cooper would be developing a reboot of the series based on Cooper's Bel-Air. The series had reportedly been in the works for over a year since Cooper posted his Bel-Air trailer on YouTube, with Netflix, Peacock and HBO Max all currently bidding for the series.[81] On September 28, 2020, Peacock gave Bel-Air a two-season order, with the series produced by and copyrighted to Universal Television.[82][83] In September 2021, the full cast was announced with newcomer Jabari Banks cast as Will Smith, Adrian Holmes as Philip Banks, Cassandra Freeman as Vivian Banks, Oly Sholotan as Carlton Banks, Coco Jones as Hilary Banks, Akira Akbar as Ashley Banks, Jimmy Akingbola as Geoffrey, Jordan L. Jones as Jazz and Simone Joy Jones as Lisa.[84] The series premiered in February 2022.[85] Much of the cast virtually reunited over a video call in an episode of Smith's Snapchat reality series Will from Home that premiered in April 2020.[86] A reunion of the surviving original cast, The Fresh Prince Reunion, aired on HBO Max in November 2020. Among other reminisces, Janet Hubert appeared, also appearing around this time in a joint radio interview with Smith where the two reconciled.[87][88] More information and context were offered regarding the situation between Smith and Hubert and her exit when the two met for their conversation. Hubert discussed the turmoil in her personal life, her abusive marriage and that she had not actually been fired by the show. She was offered what she described as a "bad deal" to return for the fourth season and she turned it down. Smith talked about how grappling with his rapidly increasing fame at such a young age led him to make decisions during the time that he now regrets and wishes he had made differently.[89] The reunion show also features a tribute to James Avery, who died in 2013, that was shown to the surviving cast. The tribute brought the entire cast to tears.[90] ^ Tied with Hangin' with Mr. Cooper and The Jackie Thomas Show ^ Tied with Dave's World ^ "The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air". TV.com. CBS Interactive.
